THE PLAN OF THE AUTHOR IN WRITING THIS SERIES OF BOOKS.

Throughout these tales the plan has been to present a picture of ordinary life, with its small daily events, its pleasures, and its trials, so as to draw out its capabilities of being furned to the best account; great events, such as belal only a few, are thus excluded it and in the hope of he ping to present a nuc. of an example, to the perplexities of daily life, the incidents which reder a story exciting have been scribted, and the attempt has been made to make the interest of the book depend on character painting.

"The first of her writings which under some seaton here was a 'Heir,' and what a sensation it was 'Referring to the resists of the tear washed covers of the cosy aforeasid, we find belonged to the 'eighth thousand.' How many thousand we been issued since by its publishers, to supply the demand row, and the places, of drowned, dissolved, or sweet away despise, we do not attempt to conjecture. Not individuals siely, but households consisting in great part of tenderared young dansels were plunged into mourning. With a leading equalitative with fictuious heroes (not to speak of all ones), from Sir Charles Grandson down to the nursery of Carlton, we have little hesitation in pronouncing Sir Guy lidel Carlton, we have little hesitation in pronouncing Sir Guy heaville of Redelyfle, Barouet, the most admirable one that we ever met with, in story or out. The glerious, joyous boy, the brilliant, ardent, chivatrous child of genute and of future, crowned with the beauty of his early holiness, and overshallowed with the darkness of his hereditary doom, and the soft and touching schees of his early death—what a caution is there! What a vision!

Biernatzki, the author of this work, was the grandson of an called Polish nobleman. He died in the zesith of his fame, leaving "The Hislig" as his chef d'ouver. In Germany it is very popular, and has ron through several editions. It is remainable for brillant descriptions of nature and natural phenomens, for profound discussions of momentous themes, and especially in its pictures of the haity, for revelations of an entirely new phase of human life. A positic spirit pervades it throughout, and frequently crystallines into genes of rare purity and brillinery. The translation is so didensate and elegant that it might well pass for an original highs work.

ADVENTURES OF GERARD, THE LION-KILLER.
Of alventures and combate with this most powerful of wild animals, are full of wild and tragic interest. We have the roar of the hing of beast as he seeks his proy; we see him engage in terrific combate with his brothers of the woods; we belond contest after contest with the Arab Sheik and his people, creating to death a score of the brave natives ere be yields up his life; we follow him to his den, and behold his affection for the cube of his roal spouse, and his loving care for her welfare. Many an improvides husband might learn here a lesson from the beaut. Self-denial, as appears from Gerard's testimony and experience, is one of the traits which the Lion invariably exhibit toward the Lionese, both before and after the birth of her young. They usually go in couples, and have been known to live together for lining years in the same forest. The Lion of the managerie is but a sparied one compared to his majesty of the forest.

It is further urged that the Ambrotype is durable, although it has not been long enough in existence to know what it will turn out. Thus far, many of them have failed to stand the effects of heaf and cold; they scale off, blister and spot in various ways, so that it is not uncemmon for them to become worthless in a few days after they are made, as every one must know white has noticed some of the show cases along Broadway for the past few months. But the Daguerreotyre has stood the test for fifteen years, and we have pictures made a dozen years ato, which are as clear and expressive as when first taken. Sliver plates never break or change in character, but glass is "mighty uncertain."

that it is needless for us to add one word of commendation to the verdlet of approval silvesdy rendered. When Mr. Sparrowgrass first commenced his revealings of rural experiences, mishaps and pleasures, it seemed that the vein, although se rich at the opening, would soon be exhausted. But our readers are well aware of the success with which it was wrought. In our view the book contenns are true humor, of the sterling, old-fashioned, gentle sort, than any written in this country for a long, long while. It adds to your enjoyment of it that this humor is often so subtle that you do not know where it lies. The thing said is most in itself so mirrifulor es oparhetic, and yet when said it is most facetions or affecting, as the case may be. It is such gentle tomober, producing all the desired effect, and yet exarrely recognized, which must the true humorist so carely most in tonse dear of feeting estimations and cored with

** THOSE BEAUTIFUL AMBROTYPES."—
BE CARE OF NEW NOTIONS.—The newly invented Picture on Glass—commonly sailed the AMBROTYPE is made at ROOTS Daguerreian Galleries far all who particularly desire it. But it's no more tean justice to the public to say that Ambrotype are, for several reasons, the least valuable of any Picture yet made. These reasons are apparent. The Ambrotype is made on glass, and of course is extremely liable to break, and when broken that is the last of it. As an instance, take the case of a gentlemma who called recently to get a broken Ambrotype copied. It was the only Portrait of a wife who had clied suddenly away from home. On the return of the stilleted haband, in spite of the utmost care, some of the isalroad begauge amashers had so knocked his truth about as to break the picture. The misfortune was irreparable, and the husband ir consolable. A Daguerrestype or a Photograph will stand Ruccking about, breaking of glass, &c., and yet comment unbarmed.

It is firther urged that the Ambrotype is durshie, although it
